Parents Deny They Drugged 2 Girls With Barbiturates

Cleveland — P — Two "sleeping beauties" awakened at last from their strange, drug-imposed world of sleep have been made wards of juvenile court.

That action was taken last night after Cleveland police asked the court to protect the girls from any further sleep-inducing drugs which tests showed had been secretly administered to them.

Police questioned the parents, Vincent and Lillian Fratanonio. They steadfastly denied drugging Bernadette, 3, and her sister Venita, 5.

Detectives said an eye dropper showing traces of barbiturates had been found in Mrs. Fratanonio's purse in her Cleveland Heights home yesterday. She was questioned at St. Ann Maternity hospital where she has been since giving birth Tuesday to a third daughter, her fifth child. The father was questioned at Central Police station.

Children Happy

Meanwhile at Mount Sinai hospital the two girls played happily. They have been placed in an isolated room with no visitors permitted. Authorities disclosed yesterday they had found the cause of the mysterious ailment that had puzzled doctors for months.

County Coroner Samuel R. Geher said traces of barbiturates had been found in the bloodstreams of the two girls and that the drugs were responsible for the sudden lapses into coma.

"No, no, no!" cried 29-year-old Mrs. Fratanonio after questioning by police. "How could I have done a thing like that?" she asked a news reporter. "I never had the chance I was not there all the time."

After searching the Fratanonio home, Detective Sgt. Norman Ferris, along with Detectives William Mueller and Stanley Shika, went to juvenile Judge Margaret Spellacy. The judge signed an emergency order saving the condition of the children was such that the state would be warranted in assuming their guardianship.

Nixon, Kennedy Planning Trips Into North

Presidential Hopefuls Go to Celebrations In Different States

Washington — P — Presidential candidates Richard M. Nixon and John F. Kennedy planned to leave the heat and turmoil of Washington this weekend and head north.

Vice President Nixon, the Republican candidate, scheduled a head start. He was set to take off for Maine today while Sen. Kennedy, the Democratic candidate, remained behind to fight for his minimum wage bill in Congress.

Nixon plans to take part in the 200th anniversary celebration of Cumberland county. He won't pass up the opportunity to put in some words for his bid to the presidency.

Before flying to Maine, Nixon meets with university and college professors who are forming a 'scholars for Nixon' committee.

The plans for Nixon could change if his vote were needed in the senate.

Kennedy will take part in ceremonies commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of Franklin Roosevelt's signing of the social security act at Hyde Park, Ill.

Kennedy was running in strong opposition in an attempt to speed a senate vote on his bill. He wants to increase the minimum wage and extend it to five million more workers.

Instead of delaying a vote day after day, let us at least begin to vote on some of the amendments, Kennedy said Friday night.

The meeting with Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt will be held despite a tragedy in the Roosevelt family.

5 Crewmen Killed as Fire Cripples U. S. Minesweeper

Savannah, Ga. — P — A fire tore through the engine room of a U. S. minesweeper at sea last night, killing five crewmen and crippling the 170-foot vessel.

It was first reported the USS Exultant one day out of its home base at Charleston, S. C., and bound for Miami, Fla. had an explosion.

However, a navy spokesman at the Charleston Naval Base said today there was no explosion — just a fire. The ship was about 70 miles southeast of Savannah when it was out reported.

It from diesel oil spilling from a ruptured fuel line. The spokesman said the middle section of the ship in which the engine room is located was extensively damaged.

Taken in Tow

The Exultant's sister ship, the Sagacity and the Nimble and the destroyer Cone were close by to give assistance. There were no reports of injuries to other crewmen.

The Exultant was taken in tow by the Nimble about midnight about six hours after the accident and was being towed into Savannah.

She was expected to arrive about noon.

Details of the fire were sketchy. The navy said it had little information and added that names of the dead would be withheld until kin are notified.

At 6:24 p. m. yesterday the motor vessel Tropicana radioed to the Savannah coast guard a report of a ship in distress. Later the Tropicana said the Exultant had suffered a severe fire in the engine room.

Atlantic fleet headquarters advised the naval reserve training center at Savannah to have ambulances at the dock to remove the dead. Arrangements were to be made for berthing the Exultant's four officers and 60 crewmen at Hunter Air Force base.

Asuncion, Paraguay — Groups to President Alfredo Stroessner's iron-fisted rule and even communists, if they are hungry.

Toughest Prison Itacumbi is reputed to be Paraguay's toughest political prison. Father Murphy's persuasive powers are credited with having arranged the transfer of many inmates to better prisons. In 140 men interned there when he started going to Itacumbi, the number came down to 60 in a short time, although it has reportedly swelled to 100 now with new political arrests.

He is Father James L. Murphy, a Roman Catholic priest from Kingston, N. Y., known all over Asuncion as Padre Miguel.

When he started going to Itacumbi, some months ago, guards tried to stop him. He threatened to call the U. S. ambassador. He got through. But he avoids getting mixed up in politics.

Farmer Held In Shooting

Wounds Neighbor In Dispute Over Property Lines

Post-Crescent News Service
Green Bay — F — A 56-year-old Brown county farmer was held on an open charge today after admitting, authorities said, that he shot and wounded a neighbor during an argument over property.

Sheriff Artley Skenandore said that Peter Vanden Heuvel, who lives near De Pere, grappled with a neighbor, John Cashman, 29, and then went into his home, grabbed a rifle and shot the younger man.

Cashman was taken to a Green Bay hospital where he underwent surgery for a wound above his hip.

Skenandore said the shooting apparently was the climax of a smoldering feud between Cashman and Vanden Heuvel which began when Cashman and his brother, Edward, 33, purchased the farm from Vanden Heuvel a year ago. Skenandore said the purchase was consummated with the stipulation that the Cashmans should obtain title to the farm and that Vanden Heuvel keep the farm home and an acre of land upon which the home was built.

Friday night Vanden Heuvel complained that the Cashman brothers were using part of his land as a driveway and ruining his trees.

103 Per Cent Rise In Students Seen For State in Decade
Madison — F — The coordinating committee for higher education estimates that college enrollments in Wisconsin will increase 68 to 103 per cent in the next 10 years.

The committee, in its semi-annual report published Friday, said that public universities and colleges would absorb no less than 70 per cent of the total enrollment.

The committee stated that it is confident that Wisconsin people are both "willing and able" to provide greater financial support to meet the costs of larger enrollment and other needs.

Substantial improvement of faculty salaries also should be made, the committee stated.

"Most sources agree that salaries should be doubled in the next 10 years," the report stated, adding that if this is not done schools might be priced out of the market for teachers of high ability by business, industry and government.

The committee opposed raising student fees which now defray about 20 per cent of the instructional cost at the University of Wisconsin and at state colleges.

Man Charged With Writing Bogus Checks

How Capsule Was Recovered From Pacific Ocean

Pt. Mugu, Calif. — F — Basun's Mate Third Class Robert W. Carroll, 22, took a deep breath — and jumped feet first into history.

Bobbing in the ocean 20 feet below him was the capsule of the Discoverer XIII satellite, bright orange against the yellow-green dye marker it released when its plunge from space ended in the Pacific.

In went Carroll, wearing trunks, swimfins and an inflatable life jacket. The helicopter he jumped from dropped a line. He attached it to the 300-pound capsule, a winch whirled, and history was made.

Carroll, a navy frogman from Keene, N. H., became the first man to touch an object recovered from orbit. The helicopter rushed the capsule to the satellite-recovery ship Haiti Victory, where it was crated and returned to Honolulu.

One of the greatest searches in history preceded Carroll's leap. A U-2 reconnaissance plane, other air force planes and navy ships had tracked the descending capsule as it dropped from the orbiting rocket toward the sea 330 miles northwest of Hawaii.

Big air force transports were circling the bobbing capsule when the recovery helicopter, launched by the Haiti Victory, reached the spot late yesterday afternoon.

Mayor Fredericks said the quick action was necessary to carry on city business. Friday was the scheduled payday for city employees and the city clerk must sign all city checks.

Observers Fail to Spot New Satellite

Only one report of possible sighting of the "Echo" balloon satellite was made to the Post-Crescent this morning, but there is some question whether the observer saw the balloon or something else.

That sighting was reported at 11:17 p.m. Friday, but the balloon was not scheduled to be visible at that time. Several people reported they were unable to spot the satellite at times it was scheduled to be visible, although skies were clear. Authorities had not developed an accurate timetable Friday, but are expected to do so soon.

Milwaukee — F — An elderly former Neenah man was struck by a car and killed and a Janesville man died in a fiery crash as Wisconsin's highway toll for the year climbed to 468, compared with 461 on this day a year ago.

Robert W. Sterns, 22, Janesville, died Friday night when his auto crashed into a parked car on a Janesville street and both autos burst into flames. His body was burned beyond recognition. Identification was made by two companions.

Civil War Spy Story Tells Tale of Love

Confederate Captain Wins Bride in Steel Hour Show on CBS Aug. 24

BY JINGO During our civil war, espionage was hampered and helped by pockets of loyalties in both the union and confederate sides. Because of the fervid dedication on both sides and the amateurish lack of experience and in many cases lack of plan, the spies took on a glamour that has become a part of our legends.

Certainly one of the most successful of the Confederate spies was Capt. Thomas H. Hines, only recently discovered as a mine of almost incredible exploits, including the nearly successful arson of New York City.

Now his most swashbuckling exploit will be dramatized for television. On Aug. 24 CBS will present "Bride of the Fox," the story of how Hines infiltrated an aroused populace and the U. S. secret service to claim his sweetheart as his bride. Richard Kiley plays the "fox" and Alan Baxter the secret service colonel he thwarts in the Steel Hour show.

With the Civil war centennial just around the corner, adventure stories of the genre will be coming fast and furious, but Jingo predicts no character will emerge with as much color and flair as Tom Hines, one of the most dangerous men of the confederacy. If his collaboration with the Democratic copperheads can be toned down, Hines may be the center of a series.

On successive nights next month ABC will premiere a pair of almost identical series, portraying the tribulations of widower fathers raising boys. There has been some complaint of TV mothers and children making TV fathers look ridiculous, but this seems to be laying on the correction a bit thick.

The first of the stablemates will star Wisconsin's own Fred MacMurray on Sept. 29 in "My Three Sons," played by Tim Considine, Don Grady and Stanley Livingston and looked after by grandfather William "I Love Lucy" Frawley.

Authority in the Congo

The argument in the Congo concerning the authority of the United Nations to send troops into Katanga province pointed up the appalling weakness of the U. N. that we forget in our eagerness to have the problems of the world neatly solved. United Nations troops exist only when they are accepted by those whom they are supposed to control.

There is nothing new in this conclusion. When the troops were used after the Suez invasion, they were permitted because France and England clashed in opinion with the United States and couldn't afford to have open warfare. Israel did not dare continue the battle without her two big allies and Egypt and the other involved Arab nations were glad to be able to save face in a fracas which they were losing. The U. N. Emergency Force still patrols the Gaza strip and Israel-Arab borders. Both sides want the troops to keep them from the necessity of fighting each other.

At the time of the Hungarian revolt there never was even an attempt to send U. N. troops into an area which clearly was being invaded by the Russian army. No one seriously suggested sending U. N. forces into Tibet when the Red Chinese took over. The U. N. felt it had authority by its resolutions condemning both actions. But the fact that such troops would be resisted and repelled or bring on a world war was recognized and acknowledged.

Legislation Without Representation

The National Association of Home Builders of the United States is a well-organized group of men engaged in the business of building homes commercially. The organization does not include the individuals for whom the homes are built and thus the association has much less voting power than the unions which work on the jobs. Thus when politicians come to choose between the members of this association and the members of the building trades they have no hesitation in selecting the group with the most votes.

The other day in Washington, Sen. John F. Kennedy, the Democratic nominee for president, had no hesitation about jamming his bill on common situs picketing through the Senate labor subcommittee over the protests of Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) that there was not a quorum present. The bill, if enacted, would permit what is known as common situs picketing in the building trades industry banned by a 1952 supreme court decision.

The National Association of Home Builders has been frantically calling upon its members and all others interested in home building to oppose this bill. They claim that if it is adopted it could undo all of the work in research and development of new methods of construction, new materials and new building techniques which the National Association of Home Builders has promoted.

The association claims that non-partisan labor relations experts believe that the bill will permit unions to strike on a construction job because they object to certain manufactured products, prefabricated components or a preassembled item on the construction site.

Any government must be legitimately accepted as to its authority and responsibilities by the people or it must have sufficient force to maintain itself in power. The latter can lead to the former as in Soviet Russia and Franco's Spain although there always is the danger of revolt. The government of the United States is clearly legitimate since the citizens never really doubt its authority. But the governments of Poland, Hungary, East Germany and perhaps the Dominican Republic rely upon force to exist.

The United Nations' authority is constantly in doubt because of the vagueness of the definitions of domestic issues. But even in a situation clearly within its scope there always will be hesitancy to allow U. N. troops to force their way because this is a commitment upon all member nations to go to war. The fact that U. N. troops clearly do not have the weapons for modern warfare is not as important as the realization that they do not have the authority.

If negotiation doesn't keep U. N. troops in Katanga, the U. N. has suffered a severe and perhaps fatal blow to the prestige of the Emergency Force. Lumumba then can very easily demand the removal of the U. N. from the rest of the Congo and chaos will result. And in the future, no one will be afraid to resist U. N. troops and may feel it necessary for a sovereign nation to do so.

That they claim could damage the home builders' business, could damage the home builders' chances of getting a better home at a lower price, and could damage the over-all economy of any locality.

The supreme court ruling forbids picketing by a single union on construction jobs where several contractors or subcontractors are concerned, since such picketing shuts down all work even though only one union may be involved in a dispute with an employer.

The subcommittee had only three members present which was less than a quorum. Sen. Goldwater, a member of the committee, remained outside the committee door and shouted that the subcommittee could not meet under Senate rules until a quorum was present. Sen. Goldwater could not enter the room because if he did his presence would make up the quorum.

Kennedy had been forearmed with advice from the Senate parliamentarian of the ruling that the meeting would be legal unless there were objections on grounds of no quorum. Of course Sen. Goldwater was providing the objections but Sen. Kennedy held that the objections had to be made within the room to be valid. He invited Goldwater in but of course he could not accept because to do so would provide the needed quorum. The result was approval of the bill.

Sen. Kennedy had no problem in deciding his course because the labor organizations are numerically greater than the members of the home building association. Those most affected are the people who will build houses in the future but they are not organized and therefore need not be consulted.

The Old House

There it stands up on the hillside
Battered by the storms of years
Empty now and long forgotten
No one left to see its tears

Once the dream of happy lovers
Living through the days to come
Once the pride of generations
Now unfit for lowest slum

Many tales this house could tell us
Of the glories of the past
Many tales of joy and sorrow
One for every shadow cast

It has heard the laugh of children
Playing by the kitchen door
It has heard the songs of mothers
And the dance upon the floor

It has known the silent treading
Of that grim unbidden guest
It has heard the cry of anguish
From a loving lonely breast

Now it stands and waiting watches
But its heart it never bares
This its question still unanswered
Is there no one left who cares

Feels Suggested Airport Site Isn't Far Enough West of Neenah

Editor, Post-Crescent

Having just read your editorial on "Oshkosh and the Joint Airport" I was taken by the question "Who would gain?" and your answer that everyone would gain by having a joint airport. I happen to be one of those "every-one" that would have nothing to gain unless you call having big airplanes or jets flying over or near your home a benefit.

This writing may be premature but if we were to have a joint airport the location becomes a problem and affects some cities and its people more than others. As we read previously the Fisher report suggested several locations with the first choice being just west of Neenah. Having just moved into a new home near this "choice location" I am not very happy to face the prospect of having a runway flight pattern practically in line with my house. As dim as this prospect is, I think it is secondary to greater evil.

A glance at a map of Neenah shows that the city's most recent annexation is on the west side of Highway 41 and that this subdivision is right in line with the east boundary of the proposed airport. Further study of the map shows that the nearness of such an airstrip would certainly retard if not stifle the residential growth of the city to the west and leave only a southerly direction in which to move.

With the growth our area has enjoyed in the last 10 years it would seem that serious consideration should be given changing the "choice location" from one near the west end of Neenah to one farther west. It would be just as accessible to Oshkosh via U.S. 45 and the extra five minutes travel time for Fox Cities people would be a small price to pay to live in cities which were able to keep up with the continued expansion we know is here and which will be accelerated by this airport project. It seems to me that we can learn something from the mistake Appleton and Outagamie county made years ago in placing their airport where they did, and it seems to me we can learn something from the success Green Bay is enjoying in placing their airport out of the area of metropolitan expansion.

Misunderstood Word Alters Farm Speaker's Expression

Editor, Post-Crescent

I would like to commend the Outagamie County Farm Bureau and County Agents office for sponsoring a recent milk marketing forum at Black Creek.

The Post-Crescent is also to be complimented for the ample space which it devoted to the meeting.

There is one place in the story which might create an impression contrary to what the speaker intended.

This is where I am quoted as saying "There is no longer a question of whether there will be government controls (in the dairy industry) but a question of how much, when and where."

Actually, the statement was, "There is no longer a question of whether there will be a government role in the dairy industry" — etc.

Thus the expression takes on an entirely different meaning.

As for the "role" of government in the dairy industry, I have reference to such existing programs as federal milk marketing orders, school milk program, government purchase of dairy products for the armed forces, donations of surplus dairy products to the needy, and dairy exports through Public Law 480.

Such programs do not involve controls on dairy farmers and Farm Bureau supports them.

There is a vast difference

ness. He has been somewhat blurred.
Consider a man like Sen. Alexander Wiley, whose career has earned him the title of leader of his party in the state, and his record and ideological makeup against some of the more conservative spokesmen of his party. There are GOP stalwarts within Wisconsin — notably in the strongly Republican Fox river valley — who regard Wiley as an apostate, as a man who is indistinguishable on important issues from the Democratic seatmates with whom he works in Washington. Between him and Rep. Van Pelt of Fond du Lac, to select a comparison at random, there is at least as much difference of outlook as between the extremes in national Democratic politics.

The Democratic party of Wisconsin has risen so suddenly and so recently that such disparities are not yet so readily visible. But they exist. Between Rep. Kastenmeier of Watertown and Rep. Zablocki of Milwaukee, to name two contemporary men of considerable rank in the newly strengthened state party, there is a significant difference of viewpoints on fundamentals.

Between Gov. Nelson, tempered as he has been by the realities of executive office responsibilities, and some of the liberal doctrinaires of his party organization, there is a great ideological chasm. Within the party organization there is a remnant of veterans of older times that must feel strange and uncomfortable in the contemplation of the recruits of recent years.

NORMAL, NATURAL

These things are normal and natural, and necessary under a two party system. Often the politician must accommodate himself to inhospitable climates. The young men in Milwaukee today who are interested in a political career, to illustrate, are likely to move into the Democratic party, whatever their private convictions and philosophies, because there is no Republican party there worth the name and no chance whatever to use the GOP label as a vehicle for election. There are Republican districts where the choice is equally limited for the ambitious young man whatever he may believe on public policy.

The political party is an alliance of interests, ideas, persons and purposes for the business of getting and holding power and the parties of Wisconsin are miniatures of the parties of the nation.

sun. The Russians still have one earth satellite in orbit.

Recent satellites have been greatly improved for both space-probing and earth probing and are sending back a tremendous amount of data to process and evaluate. New information is being added almost daily to our knowledge about weather, location of land masses, solar radiation, electric disturbances of the ionosphere that affect radio, radar and television, the effect of gravity in relation to the sun and the moon.

Scientists are predicting that we may have manned space ships and exploring parties to the moon within the next 10 years. There are a great number of steps that need to be taken before that will be possible, but it is in the foreseeable future. Before that, however, there undoubtedly will be manned space platforms bound to the earth's gravitational system to determine human reaction, particularly on re-entry before we launch farther into outer space, which so far as we know is without limit.

Foxes Add Another Game to Huge Lead

Jolt Soos; Des Moines Here Tonight

BY JOHN L. FAUSTIAN
Post-Crescent Sports Editor

The magic number is 21! Any combination of Fox Cities wins and Sioux City losses that adds up to 21 will assure Foxes' fans of seeing

Symeon Saverine

A pennant fluttering from the Goodland field mast for the first time in the park's history.

The irrepressible Foxes took another lengthy stride in their titleward march by brushing aside Sioux City, their one-time tormentor, 8-3, here Friday night. The victory was the fourth straight, the seventeenth in the last 19 games and the seventeenth of the season for the Three-I league front-runners.

Des Moines' Demons invade Goodland field at 8 p.m. today for the start of a 3-game series. They also meet the Foxes at the same time Sunday night in the "Union and Employes" booster game.

The Foxes last night singled the Soos down the road to oblivion with a relentless and balanced dozen-hit attack that shook up all but one (Dale Willis) of the four pitchers Sioux City employed. Bob Saverine led the way with a trio of the 1-baggers, and he and Pete Ward each drove in two runs.

Trail By 34
The Soos, who had come hopefully into the 5-game "must" series trailing the Foxes by 61 games, limped away last night, an overwhelming 9 1/2 lengths behind. Sioux City retains second place only by a matter of percentage points over Lincoln, which split a pair with Cedar Rapids.

In opening up their biggest lead of the campaign, the Foxes muffled the Soos for the seventh time in their last nine tries. For the Foxes, who had lost seven of their first eight against Sioux City, this complete turn-about ranks as a key factor in their pennant drive.

It also took pitching to "button up" the Soos last night, and again the Foxes had more than enough of it. Chuck Symeon worked seven strong innings (six hits, two runs, 10 strikeouts, four walks) to register his eleventh victory—tying the now-absent Pat Gillick for the club lead.

Symeon's right elbow, which had troubled him last Monday.

Competed in Olympic Trials

'Dedicated' Describes Swimmer Cunningham

BY MIKE DREW
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The adjective "dedicated" is overused in describing ambitious young athletes, but so many times it's hard to find another which does the same job as well.

This is true when you're discussing Al Cunningham, an 18-year-old who's one of the nation's bright young swimming stars.

Cunningham, a former Wisconsin indoor and outdoor backstroke champion, returned here a week ago after competing in both the National AAU outdoor meet and the U.S. Olympic trials.

The Yale university junior—failed to qualify for the finals in both meets but picked up valuable experience.

Serious Drills

When Yale classes were dismissed in June, Al launched serious training (four hours, or so, a day) for the AAU meet and Olympic trials. He worked out with the New Haven (Conn.) Swim club—mainly a group of Yale swimmers who keep the university's home as a base of operations in the summer.

The good-looking, 6 foot, 1 inch, 163-pounder says "it's inspiring to see what lots and lots of hard work has done for this country's top swimmers."

Jeff Farrell, who qualified for the U.S. Olympic team despite undergoing an emergency appendectomy a week before the trials, set a particularly good example for Cunningham.

"I know him fairly well, since he swam for the New Haven club," says Al. "He's an impressive guy, really."

Packers Start All-Regular Offensive '11'

20,000 Expected For Steeler Tilt In New Orleans

BY ART DALEY
Post-Crescent News Service

New Orleans—The Packers will start an all-regular offense against the Steelers in City Park stadium here tonight.

It will be the Packers' first non-league start of the new season and Pittsburgh's second. The Steelers opened by trouncing Tobin Rote and Toronto of the Canadian league a week ago.

Bart Starr, the heady quarterback who ushered the Bays to four victories at the end of the '59 season, will start tonight's game. He opened the '59 non-loop season against the Bears and lost in the last 14 seconds.

Coach Vince Lombardi said he'll play Starr for a half and then use Lamar McHan the other half.

Rest of Backs

The rest of the starting backfield will have Jim Taylor at fullback, Paul Hornung at left half and Boyd Dowler at right half and/or flanker end.

The line will have Capt. Jim Ringo at center, Fred Thurston and Jerry Kramer at guards, Forrest Gregg and Bob Skoronski at tackles, and Max McGee and Gary Knefelc at the ends. If Knefelc's knee is bothering him, Steve Melinger will open at "tight" end.

This will be a big show for Taylor, who will be playing in his home state. He gained All-America honors at LSU and this will be his first showing on home soil since he departed the collegiate ranks.

Jim was ready "for New Orleans" two weeks ago and just to prove it, he was walking on his hands as extra warmups in practice the other day.

An all-regular defense team will likely start, with the possible exception of one of the defense ends where Willie Davis might open in place of Jim Temp, who has had some trouble with a shoulder. Both Dan Currie and Ray Nitschke are ailing and it's possible that rookie Joe Hergert may see quite a bit of action.

Quite a Test

The Packer defense may get a tremendous test tonight from Bobby Layne, the Steelers' passing quarterback. He'll operate in a backfield with John Henry Johnson and Tom (The Bomb) Tracy and a raft of pass catching ends and halfbacks, including: Preston Carpenter, Jim McIlraine, Buddy Dial and Jimmy Orr.

A crowd of 20,000 is expected for tonight's game. It will be the first pro exhibition here in years.

Row Flares Over Parade

May Find Number of Athletes Limited At Olympics

Rome—A big row flared today over how many athletes from each country will be allowed in the opening Olympic games parade on Aug. 25.

Officials said only 4,400 athletes out of the 7,500 entered will be permitted to parade.

The United States, with a team of 403, has been cut back to 243, including four officials. Russia, though it has only about 300 athletes on its squad, gets the same number. So does Germany.

France and England will have 165, Hungary 141, Poland 137 and Japan 121. The bigger delegations were the ones most seriously affected.

Marcello Garroni, general secretary of the games, said the decision had been forced upon them because of the large number of athletes entered.

Unitas Combines With Moore For Three Touchdown Passes; Myhra Boots 3 Field Goals

Chicago — Johnny Unitas still is the best gun this side of the Pecos.

The triggerman of the Baltimore Colts fired three touchdowns and an assortment of other shots Friday night in sending the National Football league champions to a 32-7 victory over a scrappy bunch of College All-Stars.

A crowd of 70,000 saw the game in Soldier field in balmy, moonlight weather and countless others watched it on television.

They saw that the Colts are ready for a fast draw in aiming for their third straight NFL title this season.

Mid-Season Form
Unitas' passing was in mid-season form, and so was his main target—halfback Lenny Moore. For Coach Otto Graham's graduated collegians, virtually all of whom now will report as rookies to NFL camps, the game was a valuable lesson in the caliber of professional football.

Johnny hit Moore for a 3-yard touchdown in the first period; he rifled 3 and 18-yard scoring passes to him in the second, and, in all, connected 17 times in 29 tosses for 237 yards.

In addition to adding all extra points, Steve Myhra booted two field goals of 27 yards and another of 38.

Also Got Safety
Baltimore also got a safety, in the third quarter as George Izo of Notre Dame who will report to the St. Louis Cardinals was mobbed behind the goal line.

The Colts scored in each quarter and more or less coasted home after rolling up a 24-0 halftime bulge.

The Colts trimmed the All-Stars, 29-0, last year. The pro champions now have won 17 games in the series while losing eight. There have been two ties.

If a team ever looked good in defeat, it was the All-Stars. Don Meredith of Southern Methodist (Dallas Cowboys) clicked on eight of 20 passes for 156 yards. End Gail Cogdill of Washington State (Detroit Lions) stood out as a receiver with five catches for 64 yards.

The All-Stars were completely overwhelmed on the ground, netting a mere 13 yards.

Other principal Colt receivers, as usual, were ends Ray Berry and Jim Mutscheller, who combined for nine catches, good for 153 yards.

Girl Scouts Visit Henri Ureta, Family

Mrs. J. L. Tibbetts, one of the leaders accompanying the five Girl Scouts of the "European Patrol" on their 10-week tour of Europe, reports on their recent visit with former exchange student, Henri Ureta, and his family in Barcelona, Spain.

Henri spent the 1956-57 school year as the first student to study at Appleton High school under the American Field Service plan. He lived with the Franks G. Larson family, 540 N. Outagamie court. Mrs. Tibbetts writes "Henri has matured since his Appleton days, but he is still the same happy, smiling, carefree boy. He is serving the reformed time in the Spanish army and is, at the same time, working for the American Air Force in Barcelona." After he completes his military term he would like to return to the United States, finish his schooling and make the army his career.

Look at "Clarion"

"One of the girls in our troop brought the 1960 Clarion to show to pen pals over here, and it was taken to the Ureta home, too. Henri brought out his '37 Clarion and his American snapshots, and all of these were poured over as we tried to answer his questions about his former classmates," she added.

Mrs. Tibbetts said "The hours we will most cherish and remember the longest will be those spent in the homes of the people with whom we've visited."

Mrs. Tibbetts continued, "When we arrived, Mr. Ureta had a post card-size colored picture of President Eisenhower standing on the buffet for us to see as soon as we entered the room. Mrs. Ureta is a very charming, petite woman of English descent."

"The Uretas still feel that Spain is not understood by many Americans. They feel that the present government of Spain has been as good or better for the country as any government could have been. They said that the Spanish people have a very friendly feeling toward the United States and that since Spain has no communists—does not permit communist activity—they feel that greater understanding and friendship between the two countries would be of mutual benefit. Mr. Ureta restated his admiration for organizations such as American Field Service, Girl Scouts and others which make it possible for young people to travel to foreign countries, thus gaining an understanding not otherwise acquired."

Attend Bull Fight

While the scouts were in Barcelona Henri arranged for them to attend a bull fight. A star matador was the main attraction, and the audience was wild with enthusiasm.

Mrs. Tibbetts compared the high pitch of excitement at the bull fight with that of other European events they've attended. "This is the only event we have attended since we left the ship at which the audience seemed very enthusiastic. The audiences at the historical pageant at Versailles, the Bolshoi Ballet in London, the operas at Paris, Caracalla and Salzburg all seemed a little bored—perhaps the latter audiences were largely American. We heard no 'bravos' at any of the musical programs."

The five scouts touring Europe are the Misses Judy Rasmussen, Sharon Renier, Jane Rowe, Jane Tibbetts and Janet Kreling. They are accompanied by their leaders, Mrs. Paul Rasmussen and Mrs. Tibbetts. On Aug. 27 their trip will end when they board the "Ryndam" at Rotterdam and sail home. They will reach Montreal on Sept. 3.

Your Problems

Reader Complains That Rich People Always Seem to Win

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why is it that the people who have money always win everything? They're lucky at cards, they clean up at the races, win all the door prizes, and it seems like their numbers get picked at every raffle.

I've been to Ann Landers several charity affairs and never fails. When they call out the winner of the Cadillac, it's always Mrs. Moneybags who already has two.

I've often thought how gracious it would be if one of these rich winners would say, "I'd like to turn back this prize to the organization, and let them auction it off." But they never do.

Please explain this quirk in human nature, and give me your views.—Never Won a Thing in My Life

Dear Never: The rich don't always win. It just seems that way.

Rich or poor—everyone likes to win. It gives them a feeling of superiority and sets them apart from the crowd. This may be part of the reason some rich people are rich.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a boy 14. Ever since I can remember my mother has been telling us kids that Dad's relatives are nothing but trash.

My father's family had a big reunion last weekend and Mom refused to go. She talked my older sister into staying home, but I decided to go with Dad.

Well, I had the time of my life. I met uncles and aunts and cousins who were just wonderful. When I came home and told Mom how swell everybody was she got mad and said I was stupid and that Dad had brainwashed me. I want to get to know Dad's relatives better but I hate to cause more trouble in our family. There's plenty now. What shall I do?—Opened Eyes

Dear Opened Eyes: A boy 14 is old enough to decide for himself what people are like.

If you think your dad's relatives are swell and want to know them better, you should be permitted to do so with no editorializing from your mother. But don't add fuel to the fire by telling Mom how great Dad's relatives are when you know she dislikes them intensely.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My friends think this is very funny I fail to see the joke. My wife got a double march fracture from shopping in the stores. This is a painful disorder of the foot, which usually comes from excessive walking. She'll be on crutches for several days but the doctor says she'll be able to put on high-heeled shoes soon, which means she'll be pounding the cement again.

We've been married 14 years and have no children. Gloria is a fair housekeeper and cook. But it makes me disgusted that she has no interests except clothes and do-dads. I think it's terrible for a woman to build her whole life around shopping.

What can be done about a wife who is so self-centered?—Sam

Dear Sam: There's nothing funny about a double march fracture as many G.I.'s will testify. But it's too bad your wife didn't sacrifice her arches for something worthwhile.

If she loves to walk, I suggest the corridors of a children's hospital, or a home for the aged, or a veteran's hospital. Or she could even join the ranks of the League Of Women Voters who will be hoping voters to get the vote out this fall.

To learn how to keep your boy friend in line without losing him, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and the Petting—And How Far To Petting—And How Far To Petting," enclosing with your remittance drive, Kaukauna.

End Play Forces Favor From Your Opponent

BY ALFRED SHELWOLD

Everybody who reads about bridge must often run across the expression "end play." This is the most common and most useful of post-graduate plays. You can learn how to execute an end play in a few minutes, since it is basically simple.

The idea of the end play is to force an opponent to do you a favor. He may give you a free finesse, or a ruff-suff (by leading a suit of which both dummy and your own hand are void), or may even give you an entry to a hand you couldn't reach by your own efforts.

Let's take a typical case. You are playing the hand at six hearts, and you have the ace-queen of clubs in your hand. You need both club tricks, so you need a successful finesse. The surest way to win both clubs is to have the suit led by the left-hand opponent right up to your ace-queen.

Naturally, your opponent will not willingly do you such a favor. You must force him to give you the lead you want.

Getting the Favor
In most cases your end play depends on throwing the lead to the correct opponent — the one who must lead up to your finesse. Therefore, part of your job is to find a way to giving the lead to a particular opponent at a particular time. This is usually easy. You have a trick to lose somewhere in the hand, and you can often control which opponent wins it. Sometimes you can't be sure; you just give the trick up at the right time and hope it goes in the correct direction.

Before you give the trick up you must make sure that any return lead is fatal to the enemy. This calls for preparation. You must strip out of the opponent's hand any card he can use to get out of the lead safely. For example, you make sure to draw trumps because a trump is usually a safe return for either opponent.

Sometimes you must get rid of a suit from the dummy and also from your own hand. Then a lead of that suit will allow you to ruff in the dummy and discard from your hand.

Now we can summarize the three parts of the end play:

1. Preparation. Taking all of the safe exit cards out of an opponent's hand.
2. Throwing the lead. Giving up a trick to the correct opponent.
3. The Favor. Getting a return lead that hands you a trick on a platter.

Give these three items a thought whenever you have a finesse to take in a short suit. Maybe you can force an opponent to take the finesse for you by way of an end play.

Here's an end play for you to practice with:

West opens the seven of hearts against your contract of four spades. Your first step is to count winners and losers to see where you stand.

You seem to have a losing heart, a losing diamond and one or two losers in clubs. You can count on winning seven trumps and the two side aces. You must win a trick with dummy's queen of clubs to make the contract.

Can you force the correct opponent to give you a free finesse in clubs? That will be much surer than risking the club finesse for yourself.

Think of the three parts of an end play:

1. Preparation. You must draw trumps and strip all red cards out of dummy and your own hand.

2. Throwing the Lead. You must find a way to give up a trick to East at the right moment.

3. The Favor. East will be forced to lead a club up to dummy's ace-queen.

Complications

You can see complications ahead. You cannot afford to let West win a trick at any stage, for he would be happy to lead a club through the dummy and thus break up your end play.

A second complication is that it may not be easy to throw the lead to East. Which suit and which card can you use for this purpose? The only sure information you have is that East is very strong in hearts. Think of a way to use this knowledge.

The first step is to cover the opening lead with dummy's eight of hearts. You cannot afford to let West hold the lead with his seven.

East wins with the nine of hearts and returns the deuce of diamonds. You were hoping East would return the king of diamonds. If East had the king-queen of diamonds, you could take the ace and eventually use the jack of diamonds as a way to force East into the lead. The lead of the deuce of diamonds convinces you that West has at least one high diamond.

Step up with the ace of diamonds, lead a trump to dummy's seven, and return the 10 of hearts. East steps up with the jack of hearts, and you discard the jack of diamonds. East sees that he cannot get to his partner's hand with a diamond, so he leads the king of hearts to make you ruff. Get to dummy with the eight of spades and ruff a diamond. This removes diamonds from both hands.

Now get to dummy again with a trump and lead dummy's last heart. East covers with the ace of hearts, and you discard a low club. The preparation is complete, and East has been thrown into the lead.

If East returns a club, dummy gets a free finesse. If East returns a diamond or a heart, dummy ruffs while you discard another club from your hand. Either way the contract is safe.

Rev. Quella Dior Designer, Saint Laurent, Gets Army Call

Paris — The House of Dior's top designer, Yves Saint Laurent, was ordered today to report for his army physical Sept. 1. If he passes, a buck private may be designing for some of the world's best dressed women.

The 26-year-old creator of women's fashions, who has received two deferments, tried to stall off going into drab military uniform a third time but was turned down. The deferments had been granted to Saint Laurent while more or any "special treatment" he was getting settled as the ment.

Best man for his brother was John Jansen and groomsmen were James Salm and Thomas Loey. Usher duties were shared by Howard McCabe, brother-in-law of the bride, Simon Wynboorn and Gene Gries, cousin of the bridegroom.

Stroeb's Island haven was setting for the wedding dinner and will be the site of the reception and dance. The couple will reside at 522 Wilson street, Little Chute, when they return from a northern Wisconsin honeymoon.

The former Miss Martzahl is a graduate of Kaukauna High school and is employed at Kaukauna Savings and Loan association. Her husband graduated from St. John Catholic High school and works at St. Aubin Construction company.

Visiting Families

Colombia Beauty Wins Title

Long Beach, Calif. — A shapely, sparkling-eyed Colombia girl who has received much of her education in the United States reigned today as Miss International Beauty. Dazzling, 21-year-old Stella Marquez said, "This is the first time I have won a title."

For her, the dream came true when a panel of nine judges representing several nationalities, chose her Friday night over 51 other contestants in the International Beauty congress.

Behind her were four other finalists in the contest: Miss India, Iona Pinto, 18; Miss Iceland, Sigridur Geirsdotter, 22; Miss England, Joyce Kay, 21; Miss United States, Charlene Lundberg, 19, of Joliet, Ill.

The new Miss International Beauty beamed radiantly as she posed for press and news-reel photographers in her white sheath, solidly beaded evening gown, a long train trailing behind her.

Miss Marquez is majoring in language and psychology at Marymount college at Tarrytown, N. Y. She speaks Spanish, English, Italian and a little French.

A curvaceous 37½-24½-37½, she is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 126 pounds, and has brown hair and eyes. She plans to complete her college work before deciding on a career.

designer for one of France's leading fashion houses. He took over in 1957 after the death of Christian Dior, who helped revive France's world leadership in fashion after World War II.

Because of the importance of fashion to the French economy, it seems likely that Saint Laurent will find time—even in his crowded army schedule—to work on Dior's summer collection for 1961.

Last year, when Saint Laurent was first notified in a general call-up, members of parliament complained of his previous deferments. Defense Minister Pierre Guillaumat promised he wouldn't get any more or any "special treatment" he was getting settled as the ment.

Our Children

Youngster May Overdo Taking Responsibility

BY ANGELO PATRI

There are people, and very nice people at that, who seem to forget that while a young one, say from nine up to 12, may seem efficient, able to carry responsibility and stand on his own feet, he and she is still a child and should not be overloaded at this stage of growth with duties and responsibilities.

We hear a great deal about those who are conscientious, dutiful and as responsible as possible. There are many such children in this country and we should give them more attention and more praise. And we should remember that while they seem so able they are still children in need of adult support and parental tenderness and care.

There is the little girl who faithfully tends her small brother or sister, may be the baby. That efficient little girl needs some free time for play but she rarely gets it. She smiles seldom. She goes about the house quietly assuming the duties she has taken over and is accepted as a good child—a matter of course.

Boys are not so likely to be taken in. They are more likely to avoid such responsibilities and be off to the lot at 126 pounds, and has brown hair and eyes. She plans to complete her college work before deciding on a career.

Relief Periods
Mothers of families need help from their children and they should have it. The experiences children gather by helping their mothers is tonic to their minds and bodies. What I am pointing out is that some children overdo this to their hurt and wise parents should watch them and arrange relief periods for them. For example there is the dishwashing. Mother has prepared and served dinner so she retires from the table to rest and small daughter does the dishes, no small chore for a little girl. At least someone able if not as willing, ought to do the pots and pans?

Take the boy whose duty it is to mow the lawn. Couldn't somebody abler and more experienced help a bit? Have just good friends.

the mower sharpened? Oiled? Trim edges? Give him the lift of companionship on this lonely job? Especially when the other boys are on the baseball lot? Add to this the washing of the car and cleaning the garage: couldn't someone work with him remembering he is still a little boy? Work experiences are good for a child but he still needs the comfort of his elders' help and company.

Suzy Parker Joins Royal Society Set

London — There's a new face in the select Princess Margaret society set—the beautiful face of Hollywood actress Suzy Parker.

Green-eyed Suzy, squired by Billy Wallace, "old faithful" escort of Margaret in her bachelor girl days, went to the theater last night with Margaret and her husband, Anthony Armstrong-Jones.

They went to a play called "The Visit" at a theater called "The Royalty." At intermission they had drinks in a private anteroom. After the show they ducked into the back seat of a shining Rolls-Royce limousine and purged off to look in on an all-American show, "Harlem Heat - Wave," at a west end night club and then to a restaurant and late night cabaret. They made a cozy foursome.

Suzy, elegant in black and white, apparently made the royal grade through her friendship with Billy Wallace. They've been seeing a lot of each other since she arrived here to make a film. They've been to the races, to mow the lawn. Couldn't somebody abler and more experienced help a bit? Have just good friends.

Family Diary

When Libby's letter arrived from Camp Okonomie, I assembled the family to enjoy it with me. Libby was obviously having the time of her life, and with swimming, hiking, cooking, canoeing. The letter ended, "When I told the head counselor that you were an old Okonomie girl, Mother, and that you were driving up to get me, she suggested that you come two or three days early and enjoy the life of the camp. Wouldn't that be wonderful?"

To my surprise John, Bruce and Tommy burst into loud guffaws. "Oh boy, Mom in a canoe! That would be something," Tommy said. And Bruce continued, "Hiking and camp outs. It would kill her." John just kept on laughing.

Honor Camper
"I'll have you know," I said indignantly, "that I was an honor camper at Okonomie and that I handled a canoe very well and..."

"Sure, sure, Mom," Bruce said, "but look how many years ago that was." "The olden days," Tommy said.

I looked at John for support, but he was still laughing. "I think the boys have a point, Jeannie," he said. There was considerable more along this line and the upshot of it was that I packed gratitude at finding myself still among the surviving 1 of bed in the night when you packed the car and headed for home. There were no mirrors at camp, but even so I knew that I must present a colorful appearance. I had white lotion on my sunburn, yellow salve on my poison ivy and pink paste on my mosquito bites. The bandage on my ankle protected the nasty bruise I had received when I slipped on some soap in the shower. As we drove along

Libby regarded me anxiously. "It was kind of rough, but you did have fun," she asked, "didn't you, Mother?"

Loads of Fun
"Oh my, yes," I said, "all kinds of fun. And don't you tell your father and the boys a thing otherwise." "You mean," Libby said, "I shouldn't tell them about how

Businessmen Cannot Really Quit Working

BY THOMAS COLLINS

This column, except for a flyer now and then, gives the collective views of many retired people. Even when based on an interview with one man or woman, it will generally reflect the considered judgment of many others. Otherwise it wouldn't be printed.

I make a point of this today because I have just talked to another man who fouled up his future by taking the advice of a couple of friends. Most people, particularly businessmen, don't have more than two friends who will advise them honestly about retirement. Most of them never know more than four retired people who have set an example worth following.

Two friends and four examples are not reliable gospel. That doesn't necessarily mean this column is either. But the column has rather wide sources of information.

Typical, Trite Results
Take or leave the advice you see here. But when friends give you advice which runs counter to what you see here, at least think about it a few minutes.

This man who fouled up his future (a merchant in a 3 man) got stuck with the idea that retirement meant quitting. Fishing, traveling, reading, "catching up with all the things I always wanted to do," and that sort of thing. His retired friends, having found nothing better themselves, sold him the idea.

The results were so typical they've become trite. Five months after 65 he was trying to contact people he used to know. He wanted a job, not for the money but just to have something to do, to "get back in the swim." But at this point, for almost any retired man or woman, it is too late.

Businessman's Score
Here, in mid-1960, is the score on the average businessman approaching retirement.

1. The average businessman who will receive social security and a pension is in the black. He sees how he can get by financially.

2. This financial security drags him a little. He's fed up with the gaff and the alarm clock. He'd like some more money and he wonders if he'll be bored after he retires, but still he's safe so he puts off a decision on seeking any type of retirement work.

3. He keeps putting it off until he gets the watch.

Travel, No Move
4. But along his procrastinating way to 65, he has been making eyes at prospective job opportunities. Not too seriously, but to build up some insurance, just in case.
5. He makes a trip after he retires. He doesn't enjoy it much, but he says he does. He comes home a little earlier than his wife intended. He fixes one gutter and two fence posts, and sits down to look at TV.

6. He hasn't sold his house, moved. As a rule, this is not because he doesn't think it would be fun and economically sound, but because he's really afraid to tackle the adventure. He's never traveled enough to be sure of what he'd be running into. One day, maybe, he'll sell out, pack up, and move. But he'll think about that another day.

Returns to Gutters
7. The adjustment to the pension and social security works out pretty well. His adjustment to household life, and his wife's adjustment to his idleness work out more slowly.

8. About five or six months into retirement, he cautiously contacts people he used to know and those job opportunities he flurried with. But he finds that now there is nothing but a watchman's job or a receptionist's, or do you know how to operate a switchboard?

9. He returns to the TV set and his gutters, slightly offended and embarrassed and suddenly very proud of his pension.

Can't Really Quit
10. He seldom tries again. He settles down to growing old gracefully, and to advising friends that retirement means quitting, traveling, fishing, catching up with things, etc.

A businessman can't ever really quit. He should start by 63 to lay the groundwork for some sort of activity that will last him into his seventies.

Kohler Airport to be Discontinued in Fall

Kohler airport, the principal airport in Sheboygan county for a third of a century, will be closed when the new Sheboygan County airport begins operations this fall. The airport, located on the Lake Michigan shore northeast of Kohler, county for a third of a century, will be closed when the new Sheboygan County airport begins operations this fall.

In announcing the decision to discontinue the airport, Herbert V. Kohler, president of Kohler Co., said "With the completion of the new and larger Sheboygan County airport just three air miles to the northwest, we shall discontinue operations at Kohler airport."

Kohler airport has been a center of local flying activity since the late 1920s. The airport, located on Kohler Memorial drive and County Trunk Y just north of the Kohler company plant and within the boundaries of Kohler village, has a land area of 170.32 acres, two runways, and three hangars.

Private Port
"Although Kohler company has maintained it as a private airport, it has served through the years as a community airport for the Sheboygan - Kohler - Sheboygan Falls area and beyond," Kohler said.

"We intend to reconvert to agricultural purposes the land now occupied by the airport," Kohler said. The airport played a major role in air transportation for the area from its inception. Ships as large as the Ford trimotors flew there in 1930 and, more recently, twin-engine DC-3s.

When Camp Haven, an anti-aircraft artillery training center, was active, it used the airport.

PET DOCTOR

By A. W. Moller, D.V.M.

Q. What should we feed our baby alligator? Katy Stoffel, Neptune City, N.J.

A. Anyone who has gone through the grimaces and gymnastics of appeasing a baby to pabulum will appreciate the ingenuity needed to get a baby alligator to eat. As it is illegal to capture alligators in the United States, your pet probably is a "Camin" from South America. As a foreigner to these shores, he will need special conditions for feeding. Don't be alarmed if he shuns food for the first few days. Alligators can go hungry as long as three or four weeks. Be sure to keep the temperature about 90 degrees in the daytime and 80 at night. (If it's too cold, he won't eat at all.) Offer one inch morsels of meat or fish to a 12-inch alligator. If this proves unsuccessful, offer a live minnow or frog. Still isn't having any? Try waving food on a stick before him, or dipping his dinner in cod liver oil. Alligators know when they've had enough, and in time you'll become reconciled to this pet's irregular eating habits.

Grand Chute Assessment Up $400,000

Personal Property, Land in Town Set at $11,505,837

Total assessed value of all land and personal property in the town of Grand Chute has jumped $462,792 to $11,505,837 for 1960, according to figures released by town assessor John Stevens.

The rise is due to new construction in the town, Stevens said, and improvements made to existing property. A drop was noted however, in mercantile and farms. Mercantile land, assessed at $285,600 and improvements assessed at $1,144,300 for a total value of $1,429,900 for 1960 was $48,600 lower than the 1959 assessment. This was caused by transfer of some mercantile land to manufacturing. Stevens said, Elm Tree bakery was one of the firms transferred.

Agricultural acreage for 1960 is 15,445 for a total assessed value of $2,683,260. Acreage in 1959 was 15,893 for a total value of $2,769,600. The drop was caused by land being taken out of production for new Highway 41. Farm values also dropped because the highway cuts close to some barns and other buildings.

Residential land was valued at $1,066,475 and improvements on the land at $4,643,250 for a total assessment of $5,709,725 for 1960 compared to a total assessment of $5,274,695 in 1959.

Manufacturing land and improvements were assessed at $499,100 compared to $196,000 last year. A new addition at the Elm Tree bakery and a supply company located in the town brought the value of improvements on land up almost $300,000.

Total value of all personal property dropped $155,908 to $1,137,592 for 1960. This was caused by a fall in the price and number of dairy cattle and pigs and a rearrangement of the percentage of full value assessment. Personal property was assessed at 57 per cent last year, Stevens said. The percentage was dropped to 30 per cent this year to make the personal property and real estate assessment ratios to full value the same.

Menasha Traffic Safety Activity Rated 'Very Good'

Motor Vehicle Official Says
Public Interest Is Poor

Menasha — Menasha was cited Friday as having "very good" record of safety activities by a motor vehicle safety department representative.

The major area to be strengthened in the coming year, said Jan Marfyak, is in organization for traffic safety improvement. "Put push into it. Support your officials."

No one today is interested in traffic safety, "yet they all will give for public welfare. Let Wilbur Schmidt (state director of public welfare) walk into the legislature and they will give him half a million dollars. If Jim Karns (commissioner of the motor vehicle department) walks in, he is thrown out."

Marfyak talked top city police and government officials through the 1959 "annual inventory of traffic safety activities," prepared by the National Safety Council. He said the report must not be used in comparison with Neenah (which received a lower rating last week). "They are not in competition."

Some Ratings Misleading — Neither does the report appraise organizations or departments. It does measure and evaluate functions, he said.

In several portions of the report, low ratings can be misleading because of reporting difficulties and misunderstandings, Marfyak observed.

Performance in traffic accident reports was listed as 53 per cent, which would have been higher if the police department had been able to report the number of man-days its personnel spent on accident investigation.

In order to improve accident records keeping, Marfyak suggested sending the records keeper to a Northwestern university short course in records management.

Following Mishap

Oshkosh — Two young Neenah men were injured when the car in which they were riding went off Highway 114 in the town of Neenah at 5:40 p.m. Friday.

Donald A. Dixon, 21, 717 Congress Place, the driver, and Terry Wingrove, 22, 123 Denhardt avenue, were taken to Theda Clark hospital by a Neenah ambulance.

Dixon suffered facial lacerations while Wingrove suffered severe facial lacerations and bruises. Both were reported in good condition this morning by hospital authorities.

Dixon, who was driving a 1956 model sports car owned by his father, said he was going east on Highway 144 about 50 miles per hour and hit the shoulder of the road to avoid an oncoming car rounding a curve. His car skidded 255 feet before striking a tree on the west side of the road.

A witness said the other car was traveling in the proper lane. Dixon's car was a total wreck.

Refrigerator Cookies Easy To Make, Store

Oshkosh — For easy entertaining during summer months, keep a roll of refrigerator cookies ready to be sliced, advises Miss Lois Klusmeyer, county home agent.

The recipe calls for one cup soft shortening, half butter, one-half cup sugar, one-half cup brown sugar, two eggs, one and one-half teaspoons vanilla, three cups sifted flour, one-half teaspoon soda and one teaspoon salt.

Mix thoroughly the shortening, sugar, eggs and vanilla in the mixing bowl. Sift to- gether the dry ingredients and stir into the first mixture. Mix together thoroughly. With your hands, press the dough together and mold into one or two long smooth rolls about one and one-half to two inches in diameter.

Wrap in wax paper and chill in the refrigerator until stiff, several hours or overnight. Dough may be frozen in the freezer. Cut in thin slices, one-eighth inch thick. Bake on an ungreased baking sheet at 400 degrees about eight minutes. The recipe makes from seven to eight dozen cookies.

This Wide Variety of Beach Balls Will Cost You Nothing

BY CAPPY DICK

Homemade beach balls that cost you nothing to produce are a lot of fun because you and your family can watch them float away on the water without any loss.

A ball of crushed cellophane for example is fun to see as it floats away in the sunshine. You can accumulate the cellophane by saving that which comes on cakes, cookies, candy boxes, gifts and other articles delivered to your house. If you collect some colored cellophane along with the clear kind you can mix the colors.

Crush the cellophane as you would a wad of paper. Add more pieces to the original small ball until you have made a ball of sufficient size.

If you have some small cellophane bags they may be filled with colored crepe paper and tied securely. You may also blow such bags as you would paper sacks and tie the openings with string to hold the air. A cellophane bag thus blown up and set afloat on a sunny day will look like a soap bubble sailing out to sea.

Orange, grapefruit and lemon rinds also make good beach balls. Cut the fruit in half and remove the pulp and juice. Dip the cut edge of first one half and then the other in melted paraffin. While the paraffin is still soft fit the two halves together and hold them. When the paraffin has hardened the rind will be sealed together and water-tight. Get mother or dad to help you with the paraffin.

The hollow fruit balls do not last long with hard usage, but they are attractive floating on the water. Additional fun may be had by enclosing a message in the ball before you seal the halves together.

Skippers Sail Final 3 Races In 'E' Regatta

Neenah — The final three races in the "Sail of Two Cities," a regatta composed of class E skippers from the Neenah-Nodaway and Oshkosh Yacht clubs, are being held here this weekend.

The first two races were scheduled at Oshkosh last month but only one was completed. A light wind didn't permit the other to be finished within the time limit.

The initial weekend race was scheduled this afternoon and the others will be sailed Sunday morning and afternoon.

Eric Bergstrom of Nodaway topped the first of this year's races. He also is the defending champion. Eric Isakson of Nodaway was the 1958 winner. The trophy goes to the skipper who accumulates the highest total of points in the four races.

Musical With Hawaiian Setting Slated to Open February in New York

New York — The musical "13 Daughters," set in Hawaii in the last century, is scheduled to open on Broadway Feb. 9.

The book, music and lyrics all come from Eaton "Bob" Magoon, Jr., who reportedly based the plot on a factual event in his background.

The musical deals with a young and ambitious Chinese mandarin who came to Hawaii to marry a princess. It was prophesied that the princess would bear no sons and 13 daughters, none of whom would marry, because her marriage to a foreigner defied tradition.

Rail Merger Could Save $30 Million

Milwaukee Road,
Rock Island See
Study Completion

From the Wall Street Journal
Chicago — A merger of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific and the Chicago Rock Island & Pacific railroads should result in savings in the neighborhood of $30 million a year, sources close to the roads said.

These sources also indicated that merger studies, initiated in February, should be finished by about December 1.

Officials of the two lines have said only that savings from the merger should be "substantial" and that studies probably would be completed later this year.

Asked about the latest reports, top executives of the roads said "satisfactory" progress toward a merger is being made, but declined confirmation of the savings estimate and study completion date.

Hired Consultants
The two Midwest roads first announced they were considering a merger last November. In February, the carriers hired outside consultants to investigate the engineering, legal and financial aspects of a merger.

Merging of the two lines would permit consolidation of service between several points served by both roads. For example, both operate between Chicago and Minneapolis-St. Paul, Chicago and Omaha and Chicago and Kansas City.

The two railroads are among the largest in the U.S. in terms of track mileage. The Milwaukee operates 10,599 miles of track and the Rock Island, 7,597. The 18,196 mile total surpasses the 12,992 miles of track operated by the Atchafalaya, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway, currently the largest U.S. line in terms of trackage.

Reserve Board Approves Lower Discount Rates

Washington—P—The federal reserve board authorized four federal reserve banks to cut their discount rates from 3 1/2 to 3 per cent, effective Friday.

The reductions were approved for the system's New York, Cleveland, Richmond and Kansas City banks. The other eight Federal Reserve banks are expected to follow suit soon.

The discount rate is the interest that member banks pay when borrowing from the federal reserve system. Early in June it was reduced from 4 to 3 1/2 per cent throughout the system.

Lower Interest Trend A reduction indicates easier money and a general trend toward lower interest costs.

But a board spokesman called Thursday's action a technical adjustment to market rates. As an example, recent interest rates on 91-day Treasury bills have been about 2 1/2 per cent.

New York banking circles appeared uncertain as to whether the reduction would lower the cost of bank loans. Some bankers said a general reduction in bank interest rates must follow soon. Others said there were too many other balancing factors to make a cut certain.

None of New York's commercial banks immediately lowered their prime rate—the amount they charged their biggest customers with the best credit rating. Usually when one New York bank lowers its prime rate, the others follow. Banks outside New York base their charges on New York city rates.

North Central Picks Aide to Board Chairman

North Central Airlines has announced appointment of R. William Hughett as staff assistant to Arthur E. A. Mueller, Wausau, chairman of the board.

Hughett, a former stockbroker with Francis I. Du Pont and Co., Indianapolis, Ind., will formulate and put into operation a stockholder relations program for North Central.

Hughett, who will headquarter in Wausau, said, "We are carrying more passengers than any of the 12 other local airlines," he said, "exceeding the second-place local last year by 61 per cent. We expect that our 1960 goal of 1,100,000 revenue passengers will establish a new record for our segment of the airline industry."

"Last year, North Central carried 137 per cent more mail and 18 per cent more cargo than the second-ranking local airline. We will increase this lead substantially during 1960," Hughett said.

93 Per Cent Drop In Earnings at Allied Paper

Chicago — Allied Paper corporation, Chicago, reported a 93 per cent drop in earnings in the first six months of 1960 due to "an extremely soft paper market" and a cost-price squeeze. Sales gained 15 per cent.

Earnings in the half year ended June 30 totaled $63,824 down from $906,315, in the 1959 first half.

Sales in the 1960 period reached $18,940,941, up from $17,374,643 in the like period of 1959.

"With volume today generally on a satisfactory basis, the paper industry continues to be troubled with lagging prices despite a period of several years of almost universally increasing costs," Arnold H. Maremont, chairman, and Ward Harrison, president, said in the report to shareholders. These increased costs for labor, many raw materials and other items, "coupled with an extremely soft paper market due to over-expansion in our industry, have worked against the profitability of our company."

The executives announced that Allied acquired the Carmax corporation, Houston, in July. Carmax, together with three other business forms makers acquired earlier this year—the Egly Register company, Dayton, the Stephen Greene company, Philadelphia, and the American Register company, Boston—have combined an annual sales of about $12 million. Acquisition of the four concerns makes Allied the fourth largest manufacturer of business forms, the report said.

International Paper 2nd Quarter Sales, Profits Show Drop

New York — International Paper company, a major U.S. producer of pulp and paper, was hit by sagging sales and profits in the second quarter. The company earned $19,630,380, compared with $22,153,432, in the like period of 1959. Of the 1960 total, $1,019,879 resulted from the sale of stock in Longview Fibre company.

Sales fell to $263,262,531 from $266,320,656 a year earlier.

International Paper ascribed most of its difficulty in the second quarter to disappointing results in its building material divisions.

"In the paper and pulp end of the business," the company said, "second quarter sales were slightly above 1959 levels, but profits were down. In the building material divisions both sales and profits were down sharply, reflecting lower prices and volume."

Automation Disrupts Red Work Force

Skills Go Unused, Wages Lowered as Machines Take Over

Budapest — The Hungarian communist party indicates that the limited automation so far operating in industry here is causing some heartache among workers.

Two Soviet made machines doing the jobs of 100 people were installed in the glass-works at Salgotarjan, north Hungary. Protests came from a number of workers and even from some technical managers.

"The machines were left lying idle for some time before common sense prevailed and they were started up," says the newspaper Nepszabadsag. "This incident is not isolated. New equipment installed in printing offices, wood-working and metalworking shops has also been left unused."

At Salgotarjan, the paper said, some workers were forced to give up their jobs and were pushed into new ones where sometimes their pay was less than they were previously earning.

Hungary is committed under its five-year-plan to more and more automation. It is also committed, as a matter of communist ideology, to a policy of full employment.

Order of Things
So while praising the new machines, Nepszabadsag was quick to blame any inequalities and feelings of insecurity which have arisen on lack of organization at the top.

The paper said it was obvious that where a new machine did the work of 50 people, 49 of them became unnecessary and should get other work within the factory or elsewhere.

"This is the order of things. But it is disorder which occurs in many factories in such cases," Nepszabadsag said. "Workers have been carelessly shifted here and there, put into jobs which do not correspond to their high skills and have had their wages reduced."

"We must circumspectly prepare for the arrival of a new machinery and conscientiously regroup the labor force when necessary, bearing in mind at all times the interests of workers. Whole industries are to be reorganized on modern, automated lines. We must be prepared for what goes with this."

Lawrence Says U. S. Visit May Hurt, Not Help Soviet Chief

Americans Could Demonstrate That He's Lost Influence

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington — President Eisenhower has been told he cannot visit the Soviet Union, but Nikita Khrushchev has virtually announced that he may come next month to the United States.

This anomaly arises from the fact that the Soviet premier implies that he is planning to attend the United Nations general assembly meeting in New York city. Theoretically he wouldn't be coming officially to the U. S. at all, for he hasn't been invited.

Lawrence

The maneuver is plainly propaganda. But it could turn out to be of benefit to the free world. The opportunity could arise for demonstrations by the American people that would tell the Russian people they need a new ruler. They could learn that their present premier has lost whatever influence he might have had for the cause of peace by his boorish and insulting tactics at the May summit conference in Paris.

No American president, Republican or Democratic, will venture in the future to sit down with Khrushchev. He has insulted not only the president of the United States but the man who happens to have led the allied forces which saved the Russian people from nazi conquest in World war II.

Enemy of People

Khrushchev stands out as the enemy of his own people—a destructive influence in world affairs which can only mean increasing hardships for the Soviet people. They have to give more and more of their labor to armament for war, thus losing the benefits of a higher standard of living. They are deprived of their freedoms because of the Khrushchev dictatorship, which has attempted to justify such restrictions on the ground that an international emergency requires austerity and the giving up of everything, including freedom of the individual.

Khrushchev's big blunder was his miscalculation in diplomacy. He came to America in the autumn of 1959 and gave the world the impression that the critical issues between east and west could be settled or at least be kept from involving the world in a nuclear war. He emphasized personal conference and consultations. Even many skeptics in the United States were compelled for the moment to go along with the president's policy of trying to work out agreements at a summit conference or at the sessions at Geneva of such groups as the disarmament commission.

But this whole trend was suddenly reversed by Khrushchev, who used the U2 incident as an excuse. Russia has since shot down an American plane over international waters. If there had been no U2 incident, what would Moscow have said if the president had refused to continue to meet with Khrushchev now because of the latest plane episode?

Needn't Be Obstacle

If the heads of government really desire to make settlements on any outstanding issues, disputes over the flights of reconnaissance planes need not be an obstacle.

But the Soviet premier, by his attitude toward Eisenhower, has made further conferences out of the question. Nor can Nixon or Kennedy fraternize with Khrushchev. The American people not only would strongly disapprove of it but they wouldn't put any faith in Khrushchev's signature or his spoken word.

For all practical purposes, there can be no entente or basis for agreement between the east and west so long as Khrushchev is the head of the Soviet government. The sooner the Russian people come to understand that they need a new ambassador-at-large to replace the Soviet premier, the faster will the world be able to agree on limitation of arms and measures to prevent a nuclear war.

Nikita Star Home

One man—Nikita Khrushchev—threatens the peace of the world, and the innocent victims inevitably would include the people of the Soviet Union. They have the power by concerted action to force Khrushchev out of office and to choose a ruler in whom the west will have confidence.

If Khrushchev comes here in September—in the midst of our presidential campaign—he is due for some surprises. He may think he will be embarrassing both party candidates. Actually, they would not hesitate to denounce the reckless disregard of human rights by the communist dictatorship not only in the Soviet Union but in the captive states. Both platforms refer to the tragic plight of the satellite countries. Khrushchev will be better advised to stay home.

Hiccup Really Spasm of Diaphragm, Has Many Causes

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have occasional annoying attacks of hiccups. Sometimes an attack will last for about an hour. Is this a subject worth discussing?" — R. L. G."

Yes, certainly. Hiccups (or hiccoughs for those who prefer that a Dr. Molner spelling) can be a nuisance as well as embarrassing.

Technically a hiccup is a spasm of the diaphragm—the muscle separating the chest from the abdomen. The result: A sudden gust of air forced violently through the vocal cords that makes a hic!

Causes? As usual, there are many. Simplest ones are overeating, swallowing air, excess of alcohol.

More complicated ones: Disorders of the stomach in all ranges of seriousness. Liver, kidney or heart ailments may sometimes cause hiccups, as may disorders of the nervous system, or sometimes even an odd physiological habit.

In most cases, of course, it's a trivial thing, but it's just as well to keep in mind that sometimes hiccups can result from something that requires attention medically. If you have an extensive attack, or frequent, repeated attacks, have a checkup for stomach disorders.

First aid for hiccups consists of:

- Hold your breath.
- Drink a large amount of water.
- Or tickle your nose to create a sneeze, or tickle the throat to cause vomiting—of a mild sort, we trust. These devices bring into play different powerful muscular reactions which may overcome the spasmodic action of the diaphragm and help it back into normal rhythm. In this connection, I suppose a sudden fright might do the same thing—but in my observation, simple methods of frightening a person don't do much good, and a really serious fright doesn't seem sensible.

Medicines which have, on occasion, been useful in combating hiccups range from baking soda to aluminum hydroxide, atropine, phenobarbital and amyl nitrite—this latter being breathed.

In extreme cases in which the constant hiccuping exhausts the patient—interrupting the phrenic nerve, which leads to the diaphragm, sometimes is necessary. This, naturally, is a surgical procedure. And, in some instances, psychiatrists have found that psychotherapy is necessary.

Face Twitch

"Dear Dr. Molner: What causes 'tic-de-larue' (I hope I spelled it right.) Could this condition disappear without surgery?"—E.B."

You spelled it the way it sounds, but it's a French term, and to be academic, let's spell it "tic douloureux," meaning "doleful (or painful) twitch." It's a form of neuralgia affecting a nerve in the face. A pinch, injury or inflammation of the nerve can be the cause. Sometimes it can disappear (if the cause disappears), and sometimes it can be corrected non-surgically, and sometimes surgery is the only answer.

Ulcer in Nose

"Dear Dr. Molner: I am getting over a cold and when I blow my nose, blood is in the mucus from one nostril. Both my cheek bones ache and I have a headache. Could it be sinus? This has happened before."—Mrs. P. B."

The blood likely is from a small ulcer in the congested nasal membrane. The ache suggests that the sinus is involved.

Large Beins

"Dear Dr. Molner: Can anything be done about large veins in the hands? Does this have anything to do with anemia?"—E.O."

Some people have large veins in the hands naturally. This condition may be more pronounced in thin people than in others. There's nothing to do about it, no relation to anemia, and no reason to worry.
